Why is there 32% death duty

A ‘death benefits dependant’ is defined calculated at the moment of your death

1. a spouse or former spouse (includes de facto and same sex)
2. your children (but only if under 18 years of age)
3. any other person with whom you had an interdependency relationship just before you died (potentially, such as two sisters living together)

4. any other person who was your 'dependant' just before you died – such as people you maintain with 'substantial' financial support

If you have no 'death benefit dependants' at death you may lose up to 32% of your superannuation to the tax office.

The fourth category - people you maintain - gives you scope to create dependants. You can then escape this non-dependency tax.

For example, if you have no spouse and your children are over 18 years of age then you may not have any dependants when you die. If this is the case then you are at liberty to "create" dependants, such as grandchildren. We are happy to work with your advisers on how to do and document this.

Your Will is drafted so that from a tax p in your Will and, therefore, into your 3-Generation Testamentary Trust. From a tax point of view, a payout to the Estate is better than a payout directly to a beneficiary.

Next time you talk to your adviser you may want to discuss which method of owning the insurance is best for you. Also, your position may change if someone is likely to challenge your Will.

How do you purchase and hold Real Estate?

Back before 1981, Death and Probate Duties existed. At that time, it was popular for couples to hold assets as Joint Tenants. This meant that when one person died the survivor got the real estate irrespective of what the Will said. The Joint Tenancy property didn't go into the Will and therefore Probate Duties were avoided on that real estate.

Death and Probate Duties were abolished by 1981. In 1985, the Treasurer Paul Keating introduced Capital Gains Tax (CGT). CGT works very differently to Death and Probate Duties. For example, the CGT regime does not recognise Joint Tenancy. For the payment of CGT, it treats all property as though it was Tenants in Common. If you own property as Tenants in Common (instead of as Joint Tenants) then when you die your interest in the Real Estate doesn't go to the survivor. It goes into your Estate. This has additional benefits particularly as your Will has been drafted with tax effective 3-Generation Testamentary Trusts.

Joint Tenancy assets do not generally pass through the estate – and therefore cannot be challenged through the Will. I have not given you advice or checked to see if any particular asset is owned as Joint Tenants.

Own assets in a foreign country?

Your Legal Consolidated Will is valid in most countries. This because it is drafted compliance with the 1961 Hague Convention. However, do not rely on this rule if you own real-estate out of Australia. Make separate Wills for each country in which you have real-estate if your overseas lawyer so directs.

What if I have a Family Trust when I die?

Certain assets do not go to beneficiaries via your Will. One example of this is joint tenancy assets which we discussed above.

There may be a good reason for wanting assets not to go into your Will. Your Will can be challenged and completely re-written by a Court. A Court has the power to replace your Executor.

Another example of assets that do not go into your Will when you die are Family Trust assets. Asset in your Family Trust are not passed on via your Will.

The Family Trust succession Rule:
A Family Trust and a Will are separate. They are not related. A Family Trust should not try and deal with assets in a Will. Similarly, a Will should not mention or try and deal with Family Trust assets.

Succession planning for a Family Trust is done by changing the Appointor named in the Family Trust deed. This happens when you, as the current Appointor, die.

There are two ways to pass on the App

1. the Family Trust deed states tha Appointor when you die. (This is fashioned. It is not correct. It als

Update your Backup Appointor/Guardian/Principal in your Family Trust via a Deed of Variation. Do not use your Will to appoint your replacement Appointor.

Corporate Trustees of a Family Trust

Family Trusts that carry risky assets – like running a business – often have a company as a trustee of the Family Trust. This is called a 'corporate trustee'. If your Residuary Beneficiaries in your Will are also the Backup Appointors in your Family Trust then you do not need to worry about who controls the shares in the corporate trustee.

But if only, say one of your Residuary Beneficiaries is the Backup Appointor then make sure that this lucky person also specifically gets the shares in the corporate trustee. You do this by putting a Specific Gift of the shares in your Will.

Unpaid Present Entitlements from your Family Trust do form part of your estate

I have stated that the general rule is that Family Trust assets are not part of your estate. One exception to this rule is "unpaid present entitlements" (sometimes incorrectly called 'loan accounts'). This is when the Family Trust distributes to you, as a beneficiary, but does not actually pay you the money. This is common.

You then have an "unpaid but presently owing entitlement".

You often see these 'UPEs' in the Family Trust's financials. Such 'UPEs' belong to your estate, or worse, creditors and people that challenge your Will, when you die.

Talk to your accountant about how to get rid of UPEs.

You are able to validly sign a Will if you

1. understand the nature of the act signing a Will that gives away w
2. understand the extent of the pro what assets you own);
3. are able to comprehend and appreciate the claims [i.e. the moral claims] to which you ought to give effect (e.g. while you don't have to, many people leave everything to their spouse, in the first instance, and then everything to the children equally); and
4. suffered no disorder of the mind which poisons your affections, perverts your sense of right, or prevents the exercise of your natural faculties - that no insane delusion influences your Will in disposing of your property and bring about a disposal of it which, if the mind had been sound, would not have been made (e.g. you didn't have a 'loved one' putting pressure on you to leave everything to them 'otherwise they will put you out on the street').

If any one of these aspects of capacity is defective the Will may be wholly void.

For example, if you have cut a child out of the Will, then expect your Will to be challenged. Did the other children put pressure on you? Did they seek to poison your mind? Did they threaten you? Having a Will challenged is a bit like a divorce – messy and expensive.

A proven method of reducing the chances of success in someone challenging your Will is to put a "Considered Person" clause in your Will.

Get a Doctor's note to say you are of sound mind

Under all circumstances, get a doctor's note to say you are of sound mind. Keep that note with your original Wills.

"I have today examined Edward James Whitcombe. I believe that this person can understand the nature of a Will. I believe that this person is mentally competent to make a Will."

A second note stating:

"I have today examined Clara Louise Whitcombe. I believe that this person can understand the nature of a Will. I believe that this person is mentally competent to make a Will."

I repeat, there is no special wording. Each doctor will write their own note in their own way.

What happens if a beneficiary changes their address?

You, your beneficiaries and executors move from time to time. That is fine. You do not need to update your Will if anyone moves to a new home.

What if a beneficiary divorces? Divorce Protection Trusts

What if your child divorces?

Your Will includes a Divorce Protection Trust. During separation or divorce, the trustee can delay or withhold payments of capital and income to your child.

The inheritance can stay in the trust instead of passing into your child's hands during the dispute.

However, in a divorce the Family Court looks at how the assets came to be in a trust. It considers who gave the money to the trust in the first place.

If assets come from one of the separating couple during the relationship and are then put into a trust, the assets are considered part of the marriage. The Court is free to order that the assets in the trust be transferred to your in-law.

However, this may not apply where the money comes via a Will. Instead of your divorcing child putting money into a trust, it is you who is putting the money into the trust (via a Divorce Protection Trust). It is arguably different where the married person's parents gift their assets into a Divorce Protection Trust.

The Divorce Protection Trust sits dormant in the Will until needed. The Divorce Protection Trust activates for the benefit of the married person and that person's children and grandchildren. (This is your divorcing child, then their children and their grandchildren). The assets in the Divorce Protection Trust is provided by the parents (being you), not the married person (e.g. your child). The parents' assets are more likely to be protected from the Family Court.

Your descendants (children, grandchildren and great grandchildren) are beneficiaries of the Divorce Protection Trust, but not owners of the assets.

If any of the descendants controlled the trust through being the sole trustee or appointor (the person having the power to appoint and remove the trustee), then that person may be considered to have an ownership interest in the assets. This is, in the eyes of the Family Court.

In these circumstances, a court may decide that it has power to make an order affecting assets held by the trust. For example, an order that trust assets be transferred to a former spouse of the controller or to a trustee in bankruptcy.

However, the Divorce Protection Trust removes that person's power to control the trust while separating. This removes control.

The Divorce Protection Trust benefits the current and succeeding generations. This helps protect the assets from the Family Court.

How do I bind or staple a Wil

While stapling the Will is common and staple, you get left with a staple hole. A staple hole suggests that you had another document with the Wills, such as a codicil or some other information. Staple holes cause problems.

Similarly, binding the Will is also common and acceptable. However, it is important to never remove the binding. This leaves holes in the document. Such holes suggest that other documents were attached to your Will.

Can I print the documents in duplex (back-to-back)?

Print your Wills single sided.

Funeral Arrangements

Your Will only does one thing. It gives away your assets.

A Will is not designed to deal with body disposal. If you want to be buried, cremated or follow certain religious rites then that is a discussion to have with your family and loved ones.

Also, your body is disposed of, generally, well before anyone looks at your Will.

And in any event, directions in your Will as to your human remains are not binding on your Executor and loved ones.

It is inappropriate to put burial arrangements in a Will. We, therefore, have not done so in your Will.

A related issue is the Organ Donor Register. Again, your Will does not, and should not, document these issues.

"Wish List"

You may have tools in the shed, jewelry, photographs and a Lladro collection. You may have a desire for certain people to get certain items. But it is best not to include Specific Gifts in a Will. It adds complexity. Also items worth over $500 may be subject to Capital Gains Tax.

If you wish to give the Executors and loved ones some direction do a "Wish List".

A "Wish List" has no specific form. Rather, it is just a letter you keep with the Will. Do not sign the Wish List. Merely print or type your name at the end of the letter.

The beginning of the "Wish List" should state: "This is merely a Wish List and there is no legal compulsion for the Executors to follow any of the following. My wishes are ....."

If you have young children you can also put in the Wish List your views on how they should be brought up and their religion.

Can my spouse change their Will after I die?

Unless my Will otherwise directs, if any Primary Beneficiary dies before me or dies before reaching the Age of Majority, leaving children then those children (as each of those children reaches the Age of Majority) take what their parent would have taken. Such children then maintain the trusts their parent would have maintained, had they reached the Age of Majority, equally as tenants in common.

For the purposes of this clause all the beneficiaries named in this clause are Primary Beneficiaries.

9. Executor, Trustee and Primary Beneficiary Discretionary Powers

I, Edward James Whitcombe, give my Executor, Trustee, Appointor and each Primary Beneficiary, in respect of their respective offices, gifts, Trust Funds and Testamentary Trusts, the following powers in addition to every power conferred by this Will, law, equity and statute. Each power is independent, is to be construed in the widest manner, and enlarges rather than limits every other power. Except where this Will expressly provides otherwise, my Executor and Trustee may exercise these powers in their absolute discretion as if they were the absolute beneficial owner of the relevant property, without being restricted to investments authorised by any trustee legislation and without being required to diversify, obtain income, preserve the existing form of an investment or make equal distributions.

9.1 Protective Maintenance Trust

While a beneficiary has not reached the Age of Majority or Lacks Capacity, my Executor and Trustee hold every gift, entitlement, income, capital and capital accretion for that beneficiary as a Protective Maintenance Trust and have absolute discretion to retain, protect, insure, invest, reinvest and apply any part of it for that beneficiary's maintenance, education, health, medical and dental care, accommodation, travel, advancement, establishment in life, support, comfort and benefit. Education includes formal and informal education, training, equipment, technology and travel to broaden the mind. My Executor and Trustee may preserve capital for the beneficiary's future, acquire or retain a home or other property for the beneficiary's occupation, use or enjoyment, meet the cost of a Guardian, parent, carer or household providing for the beneficiary, and pay or transfer money or property to the beneficiary or to any Guardian, parent, carer, person with whom the beneficiary lives, educational institution, health provider, service provider or other person supplying care, accommodation, education, health services or another benefit. They may reimburse expenditure already incurred, provide for anticipated expenditure, pay directly or indirectly, impose conditions, make unequal payments at different times, accumulate income and treat it as capital, and accept the recipient's receipt as an absolute discharge without supervising the later application of the payment. In deciding whether and how to exercise these powers, my Executor and Trustee may consider the beneficiary's present and future needs, other resources reasonably available to the beneficiary, the circumstances of the person caring for the beneficiary and the desirability of preserving an enduring fund, but are not bound to obtain reimbursement, exhaust another resource or follow any fixed standard of living.

9.3 Estate Continuity and Absolu

My Executor and Trustee may retain any

They may distribute property in specie, appropriate particular property in or towards satisfaction of a gift or entitlement at a value determined by them, divide property and Trust Funds between beneficiaries unequally in kind while preserving the value of their respective entitlements, mix or pool investments with those of another estate, trust or person while maintaining sufficient records, appoint a nominee, custodian or bare trustee to hold property, and accept property from any person as an addition to a Trust Fund subject to any lawful condition they consider consistent with the purposes of the relevant trust.

9.4 Extended Property Reach

My Executor and Trustee may acquire, retain and deal with every form of property, right and opportunity presently existing or later developed, whether tangible or intangible, legal or equitable, registered or unregistered, situated within or outside Australia, on Earth, in airspace, in orbit, on a celestial body or elsewhere beyond Earth. This includes land and interests in land; cash, deposits and foreign currency; shares, units, securities, debt instruments and financial products; businesses and interests in companies, trusts, partnerships and joint ventures; commodities, precious metals, resources, water, carbon, environmental and statutory rights; insurance and annuity interests; intellectual property, royalties, licences and contractual rights; digital assets, data, domain names, crypto assets, tokens, distributed-ledger interests and associated keys; collectibles and personal property; and launch, spectrum, orbital, access, extraction, exploitation and similar rights. Every specific description in this clause is illustrative and does not confine the generality of the power or exclude property of another nature or class.

My Executor and Trustee may borrow, ra protection, development or distribution of my estate or a Trust Fund. They may secure an actual, future, contingent, several or joint obligation of the estate, a Trust Fund or an entity in which the estate or Trust Fund has an interest by mortgage, charge, lien, pledge, bill of sale, assignment by way of security, account control arrangement, guarantee, indemnity, subordination, priority arrangement, negative pledge or security interest over any part of the relevant property; register, vary, postpone, release or discharge that security; and agree to covenants, undertakings, representations, events of default and enforcement provisions they consider appropriate. A lender, financier or secured party dealing in good faith may rely on the apparent exercise of these powers and is not required to inquire into the purpose, necessity, propriety or application of money or property, the benefit to the estate or Trust Fund, the due exercise of a discretion, or the existence of any internal approval; and the receipt of my Executor or Trustee is an absolute discharge. My Executor and Trustee may disclose this Will and trust information reasonably required for finance, confirm their right of indemnity and recourse to the relevant Trust Fund, and execute any certificate, consent, acknowledgment or opinion reasonably required to give commercial effect to the transaction.

9.7 Digital Estate Authority

I give my Executor and Trustee my express consent and authority, to the fullest extent permitted by law, to access, recover, preserve, copy, use, control, administer, transfer, archive, delete and close any digital asset, data, device, computer, telephone, storage medium, network, account, service or communication owned or controlled by me or to which I was lawfully entitled to have access. They may use any password, passcode, private key, recovery phrase, authentication method or other credential made available by me; decrypt or recover data; operate or transfer a digital wallet; manage subscriptions, licences, domain names and online businesses; give or withdraw lawful consents; request information or access from a service provider; and obtain any necessary authority or court order. They may engage technical, forensic, cybersecurity and valuation specialists and give them lawful access for administration. This authority is evidence of my consent but does not require any person to contravene a law or purport to bind a service provider contrary to a governing law or enforceable agreement.

They may make, record, correct and give effect to resolutions and accounts within the time and in the manner required by law, but no provision requires the separation of a tax attribute from the income, gain or distribution to which the law attaches it.

9.10 Tax Burden Equalisation

My Executor and Trustee may deduct from a beneficiary's gift or entitlement, require reimbursement for, or make provision against any tax, duty, surcharge, levy, cost or liability arising because of the beneficiary's identity, residence, status, character or receipt of the gift, including where the beneficiary is a non-resident, foreign person, charity or other specially taxed person, so that the burden is not borne unfairly by another beneficiary or the general

Trust Fund. They may vary or refrain from applying that adjustment where, after considering written taxation or accounting advice, they determine that another course better gives effect to my Will, reduces the overall burden or avoids undue hardship without unfairly prejudicing another beneficiary. An authorised officer's receipt for a gift to a charity or incorporated entity is an absolute discharge, and my Executor and Trustee are not required to supervise its later application.

9.11 Trust Constitution, Control and Succession

My Executors act unanimously. Subject to this Will, the Trustee and Appointor of each specific trust may comprise one or more individuals, one or more companies, or any combination of them. A Trustee ceases to hold office for the relevant trust upon death, resignation by written notice to the Appointor, removal by the Appointor whether or not advance notice is given, becoming bankrupt or entering an arrangement with creditors, Lacking Capacity or being unable to perform the office, or, in the case of a company, entering liquidation, receivership, administration or an analogous process or being deregistered. The continuing or replacement Trustee may take every step necessary to transmit, register and control the Trust Fund. My Executor, Trustee, Appointor and each Primary Beneficiary may, to the extent authorised by this Will, constitute and administer one or more Testamentary Trusts or subtrusts for each Primary Beneficiary, appoint additional or replacement Trustees, provide for succession to the offices of Trustee and Appointor by deed, Will or written appointment, and terminate, vest or distribute a trust before the Vesting Day. A Primary Beneficiary who has reached the Age of Majority and does not Lack Capacity may direct that all or part of that Primary Beneficiary's entitlement be held through one or more trusts authorised by this Will or transferred to that Primary Beneficiary absolutely. Every trust continuing under this Will must vest no later than its Vesting Day.

9.13 Professional Administra

My Executor and Trustee may appoint, instruct, remunerate and dismiss agents, employees, investment managers, custodians, nominees, accountants, financial planners, lawyers, valuers, brokers, bankers, digital specialists and other advisers. They may rely in good faith upon advice properly obtained and delegate administrative, investment and management functions to the fullest extent permitted by law, but must not surrender a discretion that the law requires them to exercise personally. An Executor or Trustee who is engaged in a profession or business, and that person's firm or company, may charge and be paid from my estate or the relevant Trust Fund their usual professional or business fees for all work properly performed in connection with my estate, this Will or a Trust Fund. This includes work that an Executor or Trustee not engaged in that profession or business could have performed personally. The fees must be proper and reasonable. An Executor or Trustee must not charge twice for the same work. Any commission or other remuneration claimed must take account of professional or business fees already paid. To the fullest extent permitted by law, an Executor or Trustee who acts honestly and in good faith is not liable for a loss to my estate or a Trust Fund arising from the exercise, non-exercise or purported exercise of a power. This protection does not apply to fraud, dishonesty, wilful misconduct or gross negligence. An Executor or Trustee is indemnified from the relevant estate or Trust Fund against liabilities and expenses properly incurred in performing the office. If my appointment of an Executor refers to the partners or directors of a named professional practice, that reference includes the partners or directors at the date of my death of any firm, company or professional practice that has succeeded to, merged with, or acquired and continues to carry on all or the greater part of the business of the named professional practice, whether under the same or a different name. This provision applies to a change in the name, ownership or legal structure of the professional practice. It does not apply to a person who merely acquires the business name or records of the professional practice without continuing all or the greater part of its business.

10. Foreign Protected Tru

Whitcombe

In this clause, 'Relevant Revenue Law'
Territory under which the foreign or abse property is determined or an additional duty, land tax, surcharge or corresponding Tax is imposed. 'Foreign Person' means a person treated as foreign or absentee under the Relevant Revenue Law applicable to the relevant property, transaction, trust and time.

My Executor and Trustee have absolute discretion whether to establish one or more separate Testamentary Trusts or sub-trusts called 'Foreign Protected Trusts' where the involvement of a Foreign Person could cause additional duty, land tax, surcharge or another Tax. This is a protective power for the benefit of my beneficiaries and must not be used to punish or disadvantage a person merely because that person resides overseas or is a Foreign Person. My Executor and Trustee can instead retain the existing structure and pay the additional Tax where that course is fairer, simpler, more economical or more consistent with my intentions, including where all Primary Beneficiaries are Foreign Persons.

Before establishing a Foreign Protected Trust, my Executor and Trustee must consider the amount and likely duration of the Tax, the establishment and administration costs, the nature and value of the affected property and the effect upon every beneficiary. They must be reasonably satisfied that the expected overall benefit justifies the costs and disadvantages and that, so far as the Trust Fund permits, the intended economic entitlement of an excluded Foreign Person can be preserved.

My Executor and Trustee have power to do everything necessary, incidental or conducive to establish and administer a Foreign Protected Trust, including dividing the Trust Fund; identifying, isolating, selling, transferring, appropriating or substituting assets; allocating liabilities; borrowing, lending, refinancing and granting security; appointing eligible Trustees and Appointors; making balancing allocations; obtaining valuations, rulings and professional advice; and executing every deed, declaration, election, application and other document required.

The terms of a Foreign Protected Trust must, to the extent required by the Relevant Revenue Law, absolutely, permanently and irrevocably prevent every Foreign Person from being a potential beneficiary or receiving any direct or indirect benefit and from exercising any control that causes the trust to be treated as foreign. No amendment or other power conferred by this Will or exercisable under the terms of that trust by a Trustee, Appointor, beneficiary or another person can be exercised to permit such a benefit or control. These restrictions continue for the entire duration of the Foreign Protected Trust.

Exclusion from a Foreign Protected Trust does not revoke, reduce or forfeit the excluded person's gift or intended economic entitlement. My Executor and Trustee must, so far as the Trust Fund permits, preserve that entitlement through other property, another Testamentary Trust or balancing allocations. They are not required to divide particular assets equally or in specie.

Every Foreign Protected Trust is established under this Will and has the same Vesting Day as the Testamentary Trust from which its property is derived. So far as practicable, it is established before the affected property is distributed or appointed out of my estate or another Testamentary Trust. My Executor and Trustee must structure and implement it so as to avoid an unintended trust resettlement, CGT event E1 or E2, duty liability or other Tax.

13.3 Identification and protection of the Capital of the Superannuation Death Benefit

My Executor gives the Trustee and each relevant Primary Beneficiary a statement identifying the Superannuation Death Benefit, its tax-free component, its taxable component and, so far as practicable, its element taxed in the fund and element untaxed in the fund. My Executor and Trustee keep the Capital separately identified in their accounts and records and preserve its identity through every investment, sale, reinvestment, loan, repayment and substitution.

The Trustee may use a reasonable and consistently applied method of tracing and accounting, including proportionate attribution where exact tracing is not reasonably practicable, provided that the method is supported by the available records, is consistent with the Tax Act and does not alter the tax character or beneficial ownership of any receipt or asset. A failure to prepare the statement or maintain a separate account does not prevent this trust from arising or prevent the Capital from being traced into substituted property.

13.4 Capital held exclusively for Dependants

The Trustee holds the Capital upon a separate and continuing trust or trusts solely and exclusively for the persons who are Dependants at the date of my death. The Trustee has absolute discretion to appoint, apply or distribute the Capital among one or more of those Dependants, in unequal shares or to the exclusion of one or more of them, absolutely or subject to conditions. A person who is not a Dependant at the date of my death has no vested, contingent, discretionary or default beneficial interest in the Capital.

The Trustee exercises every power relating to the Capital consistently with my paramount intention that only Dependants benefit or may be expected to benefit from the Capital and that section 302-10(2) of the Tax Act 1997 applies to the whole of the Capital. No power is exercisable in a manner that causes section 302-10(3) of the Tax Act to apply to any part of the Capital. Every provision of this Will is read down to the extent necessary to give effect to that intention.

Despite any other provision of this Will, no power to determine, characterise or re-characterise income and capital changes the meaning of Capital under this clause or the identity of any amount comprising or representing that Capital.

13.7 Genuine loans without surrendering the Capital

Subject to my paramount intention concerning the Capital, the Trustee may lend Capital to a Dependant or another person, including a General Beneficiary who is not a Dependant. A loan may be secured or unsecured, interest-free or interest-bearing, repayable on demand or at a fixed or ascertainable time and made upon such other terms as the Trustee determines.

Every loan of Capital to a person who is not a Dependant must be a genuine debt recorded in writing and legally enforceable by the Trustee. The borrower receives the money solely as a debtor and acquires no beneficial interest in the Capital. The loan receivable, every security supporting it and every repayment or substituted asset remain Capital subject to this clause.

The Trustee must not forgive, release, compromise, assign or write off such a loan for less than its proper value in favour of a person who is not a Dependant. However, the Trustee may accept a genuine compromise, participate in a bankruptcy or insolvency arrangement, assign the debt for its then proper value or write off the whole or part of the debt where the Trustee, acting reasonably and after taking appropriate recovery steps and obtaining legal and taxation advice, determines that recovery is no longer reasonably practicable or that the likely cost, delay or disadvantage of recovery is disproportionate to the amount likely to be recovered.

An accounting write-off does not itself release or extinguish the debt. The Trustee must exercise this power consistently with my paramount taxation intention. Before making a loan to a person who is not a Dependant, the Trustee must be satisfied, after obtaining such taxation or legal advice as the Trustee considers appropriate, that the loan is consistent with the exclusive trust for Dependants and my paramount taxation intention.

Every provision and power in this Will is interpreted and exercised in accordance with the laws applying from time to time, including taxation laws.

If any provision cannot operate fully in a jurisdiction, it operates to the maximum extent permitted by law. Any part that cannot operate is severed without affecting the remaining provisions of this Will or the operation of this Will in another jurisdiction.

Governing jurisdiction

A unique benefit. Your Will faces three uncertainties. When do you die? What assets do you own when you die? What laws apply then?

Your trusts can last for generations. This clause lets the governing jurisdiction change. That flexibility may help address death taxes and protect an inheritance from claims in the Family Court or bankruptcy.

"Testamentary Trust" means any trust established under or pursuant to this Will, and includes (but is not limited to) a discretionary trust, fixed trust, hybrid trust, unit trust, bare trust, or any other trust structure, as determined and established by the Executor, Appointor, or Primary Beneficiary in their absolute discretion

9. Executor, Trustee and Primary Beneficiary Discretionary Powers

I, Clara Louise Whitcombe, give my Executor, Trustee, Appointor and each Primary Beneficiary, in respect of their respective offices, gifts, Trust Funds and Testamentary Trusts, the following powers in addition to every power conferred by this Will, law, equity and statute. Each power is independent, is to be construed in the widest manner, and enlarges rather than limits every other power. Except where this Will expressly provides otherwise, my Executor and Trustee may exercise these powers in their absolute discretion as if they were the absolute beneficial owner of the relevant property, without being restricted to investments authorised by any trustee legislation and without being required to diversify, obtain income, preserve the existing form of an investment or make equal distributions.

9.1 Protective Maintenance Trust

While a beneficiary has not reached the Age of Majority or Lacks Capacity, my Executor and Trustee hold every gift, entitlement, income, capital and capital accretion for that beneficiary as a Protective Maintenance Trust and have absolute discretion to retain, protect, insure, invest, reinvest and apply any part of it for that beneficiary's maintenance, education, health, medical and dental care, accommodation, travel, advancement, establishment in life, support, comfort and benefit. Education includes formal and informal education, training, equipment, technology and travel to broaden the mind. My Executor and Trustee may preserve capital for the beneficiary's future, acquire or retain a home or other property for the beneficiary's occupation, use or enjoyment, meet the cost of a Guardian, parent, carer or household providing for the beneficiary, and pay or transfer money or property to the beneficiary or to any Guardian, parent, carer, person with whom the beneficiary lives, educational institution, health provider, service provider or other person supplying care, accommodation, education, health services or another benefit. They may reimburse expenditure already incurred, provide for anticipated expenditure, pay directly or indirectly, impose conditions, make unequal payments at different times, accumulate income and treat it as capital, and accept the recipient's receipt as an absolute discharge without supervising the later application of the payment. In deciding whether and how to exercise these powers, my Executor and Trustee may consider the beneficiary's present and future needs, other resources reasonably available to the beneficiary, the circumstances of the person caring for the beneficiary and the desirability of preserving an enduring fund, but are not bound to obtain reimbursement, exhaust another resource or follow any fixed standard of living.

They may distribute property in specie, appropriate particular property in or towards satisfaction of a gift or entitlement at a value determined by them, divide property and Trust Funds between beneficiaries unequally in kind while preserving the value of their respective entitlements, mix or pool investments with those of another estate, trust or person while maintaining sufficient records, appoint a nominee, custodian or bare trustee to hold property, and accept property from any person as an addition to a Trust Fund subject to any lawful condition they consider consistent with the purposes of the relevant trust.

9.4 Extended Property Reach

My Executor and Trustee may acquire, retain and deal with every form of property, right and opportunity presently existing or later developed, whether tangible or intangible, legal or equitable, registered or unregistered, situated within or outside Australia, on Earth, in airspace, in orbit, on a celestial body or elsewhere beyond Earth. This includes land and interests in land; cash, deposits and foreign currency; shares, units, securities, debt instruments and financial products; businesses and interests in companies, trusts, partnerships and joint ventures; commodities, precious metals, resources, water, carbon, environmental and statutory rights; insurance and annuity interests; intellectual property, royalties, licences and contractual rights; digital assets, data, domain names, crypto assets, tokens, distributed-ledger interests and associated keys; collectibles and personal property; and launch, spectrum, orbital, access, extraction, exploitation and similar rights. My Executor and Trustee may borrow, ra protection, development or distribution of my estate or a Trust Fund. They may secure an actual, future, contingent, several or joint obligation of the estate, a Trust Fund or an entity in which the estate or Trust Fund has an interest by mortgage, charge, lien, pledge, bill of sale, assignment by way of security, account control arrangement, guarantee, indemnity, subordination, priority arrangement, negative pledge or security interest over any part of the relevant property; register, vary, postpone, release or discharge that security; and agree to covenants, undertakings, representations, events of default and enforcement provisions they consider appropriate. A lender, financier or secured party dealing in good faith may rely on the apparent exercise of these powers and is not required to inquire into the purpose, necessity, propriety or application of money or property, the benefit to the estate or Trust Fund, the due exercise of a discretion, or the existence of any internal approval; and the receipt of my Executor or Trustee is an absolute discharge. My Executor and Trustee may disclose this Will and trust information reasonably required for finance, confirm their right of indemnity and recourse to the relevant Trust Fund, and execute any certificate, consent, acknowledgment or opinion reasonably required to give commercial effect to the transaction.

9.7 Digital Estate Authority

I give my Executor and Trustee my express consent and authority, to the fullest extent permitted by law, to access, recover, preserve, copy, use, control, administer, transfer, archive, delete and close any digital asset, data, device, computer, telephone, storage medium, network, account, service or communication owned or controlled by me or to which I was lawfully entitled to have access. They may use any password, passcode, private key, recovery phrase, authentication method or other credential made available by me; decrypt or recover data; operate or transfer a digital wallet; manage subscriptions, licences, domain names and online businesses; give or withdraw lawful consents; request information or access from a service provider; and obtain any necessary authority or court order. They may engage technical, forensic, cybersecurity and valuation specialists and give them lawful access for administration. This authority is evidence of my consent but does not require any person to contravene a law or purport to bind a service provider contrary to a governing law or enforceable agreement.

They may make, record, correct and give effect to resolutions and accounts within the time and in the manner required by law, but no provision requires the separation of a tax attribute from the income, gain or distribution to which the law attaches it.

9.10 Tax Burden Equalisation

My Executor and Trustee may deduct from a beneficiary's gift or entitlement, require reimbursement for, or make provision against any tax, duty, surcharge, levy, cost or liability arising because of the beneficiary's identity, residence, status, character or receipt of the gift, including where the beneficiary is a non-resident, foreign person, charity or other specially taxed person, so that the burden is not borne unfairly by another beneficiary or the general

Trust Fund. They may vary or refrain from applying that adjustment where, after considering written taxation or accounting advice, they determine that another course better gives effect to my Will, reduces the overall burden or avoids undue hardship without unfairly prejudicing another beneficiary. An authorised officer's receipt for a gift to a charity or incorporated entity is an absolute discharge, and my Executor and Trustee are not required to supervise its later application.

9.11 Trust Constitution, Control and Succession

My Executors act unanimously. Subject to this Will, the Trustee and Appointor of each specific trust may comprise one or more individuals, one or more companies, or any combination of them. A Trustee ceases to hold office for the relevant trust upon death, resignation by written notice to the Appointor, removal by the Appointor whether or not advance notice is given, becoming bankrupt or entering an arrangement with creditors, Lacking Capacity or being unable to perform the office, or, in the case of a company, entering liquidation, receivership, administration or an analogous process or being deregistered. The continuing or replacement Trustee may take every step necessary to transmit, register and control the Trust Fund. My Executor, Trustee, Appointor and each Primary Beneficiary may, to the extent authorised by this Will, constitute and administer one or more Testamentary Trusts or subtrusts for each Primary Beneficiary, appoint additional or replacement Trustees, provide for succession to the offices of Trustee and Appointor by deed, Will or written appointment, and terminate, vest or distribute a trust before the Vesting Day. A Primary Beneficiary who has reached the Age of Majority and does not Lack Capacity may direct that all or part of that Primary Beneficiary's entitlement be held through one or more trusts authorised by this Will or transferred to that Primary Beneficiary absolutely. Every trust continuing under this Will must vest no later than its Vesting Day.

9.13 Professional Administra

My Executor and Trustee may appoint, in investment managers, custodians, nominees, accountants, financial planners, lawyers, valuers, brokers, bankers, digital specialists and other advisers. They may rely in good faith upon advice properly obtained and delegate administrative, investment and management functions to the fullest extent permitted by law, but must not surrender a discretion that the law requires them to exercise personally. An Executor or Trustee who is engaged in a profession or business, and that person's firm or company, may charge and be paid from my estate or the relevant Trust Fund their usual professional or business fees for all work properly performed in connection with my estate, this Will or a Trust Fund. This includes work that an Executor or Trustee not engaged in that profession or business could have performed personally. The fees must be proper and reasonable. An Executor or Trustee must not charge twice for the same work. Any commission or other remuneration claimed must take account of professional or business fees already paid. To the fullest extent permitted by law, an Executor or Trustee who acts honestly and in good faith is not liable for a loss to my estate or a Trust Fund arising from the exercise, non-exercise or purported exercise of a power. This protection does not apply to fraud, dishonesty, wilful misconduct or gross negligence. An Executor or Trustee is indemnified from the relevant estate or Trust Fund against liabilities and expenses properly incurred in performing the office. If my appointment of an Executor refers to the partners or directors of a named professional practice, that reference includes the partners or directors at the date of my death of any firm, company or professional practice that has succeeded to, merged with, or acquired and continues to carry on all or the greater part of the business of the named professional practice, whether under the same or a different name. This provision applies to a change in the name, ownership or legal structure of the professional practice. It does not apply to a person who merely acquires the business name or records of the professional practice without continuing all or the greater part of its business.

9.14 Power Preservation and Testamentary Validity

My Executor and Trustee may amend the administrative provisions of a trust, vary its terms, change its Governing Jurisdiction, settle a dispute, compromise a claim, obtain judicial advice or approval, and take any step reasonably considered necessary to preserve the trust, its taxation treatment, its assets or the operation of this Will, provided that the exercise does not create an impermissible delegation of testamentary power, extend a trust beyond its Vesting Day, defeat a vested entitlement contrary to law or cause the Will or a trust to be invalid. involvement of a Foreign Person could cause additional duty, land tax, surcharge or another
Tax. This is a protective power for the benefit of my beneficiaries and must not be used to punish or disadvantage a person merely because that person resides overseas or is a Foreign Person. My Executor and Trustee can instead retain the existing structure and pay the additional Tax where that course is fairer, simpler, more economical or more consistent with my intentions, including where all Primary Beneficiaries are Foreign Persons.

Before establishing a Foreign Protected Trust, my Executor and Trustee must consider the amount and likely duration of the Tax, the establishment and administration costs, the nature and value of the affected property and the effect upon every beneficiary. They must be reasonably satisfied that the expected overall benefit justifies the costs and disadvantages and that, so far as the Trust Fund permits, the intended economic entitlement of an excluded Foreign Person can be preserved.

My Executor and Trustee have power to do everything necessary, incidental or conducive to establish and administer a Foreign Protected Trust, including dividing the Trust Fund; identifying, isolating, selling, transferring, appropriating or substituting assets; allocating liabilities; borrowing, lending, refinancing and granting security; appointing eligible Trustees and Appointors; making balancing allocations; obtaining valuations, rulings and professional advice; and executing every deed, declaration, election, application and other document required.

The terms of a Foreign Protected Trust must, to the extent required by the Relevant Revenue Law, absolutely, permanently and irrevocably prevent every Foreign Person from being a potential beneficiary or receiving any direct or indirect benefit and from exercising any control that causes the trust to be treated as foreign. No amendment or other power conferred by this Will or exercisable under the terms of that trust by a Trustee, Appointor, beneficiary or another person can be exercised to permit such a benefit or control. These restrictions continue for the entire duration of the Foreign Protected Trust.

Exclusion from a Foreign Protected Trust does not revoke, reduce or forfeit the excluded person's gift or intended economic entitlement. My Executor and Trustee must, so far as the Trust Fund permits, preserve that entitlement through other property, another Testamentary Trust or balancing allocations. They are not required to divide particular assets equally or in specie.

Every Foreign Protected Trust is established under this Will and has the same Vesting Day as the Testamentary Trust from which its property is derived. So far as practicable, it is established before the affected property is distributed or appointed out of my estate or another Testamentary Trust. My Executor and Trustee must structure and implement it so as to avoid an unintended trust resettlement, CGT event E1 or E2, duty liability or other Tax.

The Trustee may use a reasonable and c[illegible] accounting, including proportionate attrib[illegible] practicable, provided that the method is s[illegible] with the Tax Act and does not alter the tax character or beneficial ownership of any receipt or asset. A failure to prepare the statement or maintain a separate account does not prevent this trust from arising or prevent the Capital from being traced into substituted property.

12.4 Capital held exclusively for Dependants

The Trustee holds the Capital upon a separate and continuing trust or trusts solely and exclusively for the persons who are Dependants at the date of my death. The Trustee has absolute discretion to appoint, apply or distribute the Capital among one or more of those Dependants, in unequal shares or to the exclusion of one or more of them, absolutely or subject to conditions. A person who is not a Dependant at the date of my death has no vested, contingent, discretionary or default beneficial interest in the Capital.

The Trustee exercises every power relating to the Capital consistently with my paramount intention that only Dependants benefit or may be expected to benefit from the Capital and that section 302-10(2) of the Tax Act 1997 applies to the whole of the Capital. No power is exercisable in a manner that causes section 302-10(3) of the Tax Act to apply to any part of the Capital. Every provision of this Will is read down to the extent necessary to give effect to that intention.

12.5 Long-term retention of the Capital

The Trustee is not required to distribute the Capital immediately. The Capital can remain in the Superannuation Testamentary Trust until the Vesting Day, or such earlier day as is required to comply with applicable law. During that period, the Trustee retains, protects, invests, reinvests and administers the Capital under the powers contained in this Will. The Trustee is not required to divide the Capital equally, make an immediate appointment or convert an existing investment merely because a Dependant requests it.

12.6 Income availability

Income derived from the Capital after it is received by my estate or the Trustee is held, as directed by the relevant Primary Beneficiary, upon trust for the General Beneficiaries. The Trustee has absolute discretion to pay, apply, set aside or accumulate that income for one or more General Beneficiaries, in unequal shares or to the exclusion of one or more of them, for their maintenance, education, health, accommodation, advancement, support or benefit.

Dependant or another person, including a

Every loan of Capital to a person who is not a Dependant must be a genuine debt recorded in writing and legally enforceable by the Trustee. The borrower receives the money solely as a debtor and acquires no beneficial interest in the Capital. The loan receivable, every security supporting it and every repayment or substituted asset remain Capital subject to this clause.

The Trustee must not forgive, release, compromise, assign or write off such a loan for less than its proper value in favour of a person who is not a Dependant. However, the Trustee may accept a genuine compromise, participate in a bankruptcy or insolvency arrangement, assign the debt for its then proper value or write off the whole or part of the debt where the Trustee, acting reasonably and after taking appropriate recovery steps and obtaining legal and taxation advice, determines that recovery is no longer reasonably practicable or that the likely cost, delay or disadvantage of recovery is disproportionate to the amount likely to be recovered.

An accounting write-off does not itself release or extinguish the debt. The Trustee must exercise this power consistently with my paramount taxation intention. Before making a loan to a person who is not a Dependant, the Trustee must be satisfied, after obtaining such taxation or legal advice as the Trustee considers appropriate, that the loan is consistent with the exclusive trust for Dependants and my paramount taxation intention.

Every provision and power in this Will is interpreted and exercised in accordance with the laws applying from time to time, including taxation laws.

If any provision cannot operate fully in a jurisdiction, it operates to the maximum extent permitted by law. Any part that cannot operate is severed without affecting the remaining provisions of this Will or the operation of this Will in another jurisdiction.

Does the Power of Attorney need to be stamped?

No. Your POA is not dutiable.

Get a Doctor's Certificate to say you are of sound mind

1. You must have full legal capacity to sign a legal document such as a POA or Will.
2. Also, your attorneys must be able to prove you were of sound mind when you signed the POA.

Ask your doctor to give you a note to say you are of sound mind. Keep the doctor's note with the POA. (Do not staple the doctor's note to the POA).

A doctor's note is not required merely to make your POA valid. However, it provides useful evidence that you had capacity when you signed. Doctors usually have their preferred wording, or they can use:

> I have examined my patient. I am satisfied my patient has full mental capacity to sign legal documents.

You can get the doctor's note either before or after you sign the POA. Usually, you do not need to get the note on the day that you signed the POA.

However, the closer the date of the doctor's note to the signing of the POAs and Wills the stronger the position is that you were of sound mind at the time of signing.

Does my POA work outside New South Wales?

A NSW Power of Attorney only works in the State of New South Wales. If you have assets in another State, then build and sign an Enduring Power of Attorney for that other State as well.

How do the persons I nominate use the Power of Attorney?

Here are some examples:

Example 1 - Using your bank account: The persons you appoint walk into the bank and present to the bank clerk your Savings Account book and an original POA. The bank clerk stares blankly at them. The bank clerk goes to see the bank manager.

The bank manager explains to the bank clerk that those persons "now stand in your shoes". They can do whatever you could do with the bank account. The bank manager asks to take a copy of the POA for future reference. The bank manager tries to keep the original POA. But the persons you nominate decline and they get back the original POA. The transaction on the bank account takes place.

Example 2 – Signing your legal documents: You have asked the persons that you nominated to sign a legal document. For example, a lease agreement for a property you are going to lease as a tenant. This is as you are on holidays overseas. And email is unavailable.

Your attorneys contact the landlord. They tell the landlord that there is a New South Wales Enduring POA. They tell the landlord that they are signing the lease on your behalf. They sign in their usual signature area and hand write under the signature:

> "signed as attorney for [your name] under a POA dated ## Month, year".

You are now bound to the lease. The landlord may photocopy the POA to keep with the lease.

This now concludes the matter. Thank you for your instructions.

Yours sincerely,

How do I arrange free witnessing at the NSW Local Court?

The Local Court deals with many requests. Make it easy for the Registry. Have your documents complete and ready for witnessing before you contact the Court.

1. Print your documents

Print your Legal Consolidated documents before contacting the Court.

Do not sign or date them.

Have ready:

- your NSW Enduring Power of Attorney;
- your NSW Appointment of Enduring Guardian;
- a PDF copy of each document;
- your telephone number; and
- photographic identification, such as your driver licence.

2. Telephone the Local Court Registry

Telephone your closest Local Court Registry and ask for an appointment with a Registrar to witness:

Explain that your solicitor prepared the document is complete, does not contain complex provisions and does not authorise restrictive practices.

The Registry may ask you to email a copy of the completed but unsigned document before making the appointment.

5. Attend the appointment

Take:

- the printed-out unsigned Enduring Power of Attorney;
- the printed-out unsigned Appointment of Enduring Guardian;
- your photographic identification; and
- anything else the Registry asked you to bring.

The Registrar explains the document's effect and checks that you appear to understand it.

The Registrar does not complete the document for you or give you legal advice.

Legal Consolidated is your solicitor. We provide legal advice about your Enduring Power of Attorney and Appointment of Enduring Guardian at no additional cost.

Book the Registrar before you sign

Telephone your Local Court Registry. Tell them Legal Consolidated prepared the documents. Have both unsigned documents, PDF copies and photo identification ready.

Email the unsigned copies if the Registry asks.

We also help your attorneys and Enduring Guardians understand how the documents operate, including if you later lose decision-making capacity. While you retain legal capacity, Legal Consolidated updates your Enduring Power of Attorney and Appointment of Enduring Guardian free of charge as often as you wish.

6. Sign only when the Registrar tells you

Do not sign or date either document before the appointment. Sign and date them only when the Registrar asks you to do so.

What if the Registrar cannot witness the documents?

Remain courteous. Ask the Registry to email you the reason the Registrar is unable to witness the document.

> "Thank you. Would you please email me the reason the Registrar is unable to witness the document? I will send it to my solicitor."

Forward the Court's email to lawyer@legalconsolidated.com.au. We review the reason given and help you work out the next step.

What if there may be questions about your mental capacity?

Age alone does not determine legal capacity. If there is a realistic prospect that someone will question your capacity, deal with it before attending the Local Court. Consider obtaining a letter from a medical doctor confirming and effect of making the Enduring Powe

The new form raised practical questions about the witnessing process. However, the Regulation did not remove Registrars from the Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW). Registrars remain authorised to witness Enduring Guardians.

The Regulation also does not affect the separate Powers of Attorney Act 2003 (NSW). Registrars also remain authorised to witness Enduring Powers of Attorney.

The NSW Local Court's published guidance confirms that Registrars are authorised witnesses for both documents and directs people to contact the Local Court for an appointment.

Ask the Registry to email its reason. Forward the email to lawyer@legalconsolidated.com.au.

Legal Consolidated can review the reason and help you work out the next step.

Enduring Power of Attorney

Complete this form by writing your responses on the lines. Clauses with options are to be completed by placing a tick in the appropriate box and ruling through those options that do not apply.

These margin notes are not part of the prescribed form and can be removed.

Please refer to the Powers of Attorney Fact Sheet that accompanies this form for more information. The Powers of Attorney Fact Sheet is also available from the Land and Property Information website at www.nswlrs.com.au

You can appoint more than one attorney. If you appoint more than one attorney, it may be useful to appoint people who can work cooperatively and in your best interest.

(Please initial the bottom of this page)

An enduring power of attorney is a legal document that allows you (the principal) to nominate one or more persons (referred to as attorneys) to act on your behalf. An enduring power of attorney gives the attorney the authority to manage your legal and financial affairs, including buying and selling real estate, shares and other assets, operating your bank accounts and spending money on your behalf.

The attorney's power continues even if for any reason you lose your mental capacity to manage your own affairs. Once you lose your mental capacity you cannot revoke this power of attorney. If you want the power of attorney to cease if you lose your mental capacity, use the General Power of Attorney form. An attorney under an enduring power of attorney cannot make decisions about your lifestyle or health. These decisions can only be made by a guardian (whether an enduring guardian appointed by you or a guardian appointed by the Civil and Administrative Tribunal or the Supreme Court).

Enduring Power of Attorney

Important information

- A power of attorney is an important and powerful legal document. You should get legal advice before you sign it.
- It is important that you trust the person you are appointing as attorney to make financial decisions on your behalf. Your attorney must be over 18 years old and must not be bankrupt or insolvent. If your financial affairs are complicated, you should appoint an attorney who has the skills to deal with complex financial arrangements.
- A power of attorney cannot be used for health or lifestyle decisions. You should appoint an enduring guardian under the Guardianship Act 1987 if you want a particular person to make these decisions. For further information, contact the Civil and Administrative Tribunal or NSW Trustee and Guardian.
- Clause 2 of the power of attorney contains powers which will permit your attorney to use your money and assets for the attorney or anyone else as provided. You should only tick those boxes in Clause 2 if you choose that your attorney is to have that power.
- This power of attorney is for use in New South Wales only. If you need a power of attorney for interstate or overseas, you may need to make a power of attorney under their laws. The laws of some other States and Territories in Australia may give effect to this power of attorney. However, you should not assume this will be the case. You should confirm whether the laws of the State or Territory concerned will in fact recognise this power of attorney.

Notes for completion

Joint attorneys

If you appoint more than one attorney, you should indicate whether the attorneys are to act jointly, or jointly and severally. Attorneys who are appointed jointly are only able to act and make decisions together.

Attorneys who are appointed jointly and severally (i.e. together or separately) are able to act and make decisions independently of each other. However, you can specify that a simple majority (if you appoint 3 or more attorneys) must agree before they can act.

Substitute attorneys

If you appoint a substitute attorney, the substitute attorneys will only have authority to act as your attorney if the first appointed attorney dies, resigns or vacates their position.

You can specify for whom the substitute is to act (e.g. if you appoint A and B as attorneys and X and Y as substitutes, you can specify that X takes A's place if A vacates office).

A substitute attorney must sign an acceptance of their appointment in Clause 7 before they can act as attorney.

Does the Power of Attorney need to be stamped?

No. Your POA is not dutiable.

Get a Doctor's Certificate to say you are of sound mind

1. You must have full legal capacity to sign a legal document such as a POA or Will.
2. Also, your attorneys must be able to prove you were of sound mind when you signed the POA.

Ask your doctor to give you a note to say you are of sound mind. Keep the doctor's note with the POA. (Do not staple the doctor's note to the POA).

A doctor's note is not required merely to make your POA valid. However, it provides useful evidence that you had capacity when you signed. Doctors usually have their preferred wording, or they can use:

> I have examined my patient. I am satisfied my patient has full mental capacity to sign legal documents.

You can get the doctor's note either before or after you sign the POA. Usually, you do not need to get the note on the day that you signed the POA.

However, the closer the date of the doctor's note to the signing of the POAs and Wills the stronger the position is that you were of sound mind at the time of signing.

Does my POA work outside New South Wales?

A NSW Power of Attorney only works in the State of New South Wales. If you have assets in another State, then build and sign an Enduring Power of Attorney for that other State as well.

How do the persons I nominate use the Power of Attorney?

Here are some examples:

Example 1 - Using your bank account: The persons you appoint walk into the bank and present to the bank clerk your Savings Account book and an original POA. The bank clerk stares blankly at them. The bank clerk goes to see the bank manager.

The bank manager explains to the bank clerk that those persons "now stand in your shoes". They can do whatever you could do with the bank account. The bank manager asks to take a copy of the POA for future reference. The bank manager tries to keep the original POA. But the persons you nominate decline and they get back the original POA. The transaction on the bank account takes place.

Example 2 – Signing your legal documents: You have asked the persons that you nominated to sign a legal document. For example, a lease agreement for a property you are going to lease as a tenant. This is as you are on holidays overseas. And email is unavailable.

Your attorneys contact the landlord. They tell the landlord that there is a New South Wales Enduring POA. They tell the landlord that they are signing the lease on your behalf. They sign in their usual signature area and hand write under the signature:

> "signed as attorney for [your name] under a POA dated ## Month, year".

You are now bound to the lease. The landlord may photocopy the POA to keep with the lease.

This now concludes the matter. Thank you for your instructions.

Yours sincerely,

How do I arrange free witnessing at the NSW Local Court?

The Local Court deals with many requests. Make it easy for the Registry. Have your documents complete and ready for witnessing before you contact the Court.

Email the unsigned copies if the Registry asks.

We also help your attorneys and Enduring Guardians understand how the documents operate, including if you later lose decision-making capacity. While you retain legal capacity, Legal Consolidated updates your Enduring Power of Attorney and Appointment of Enduring Guardian free of charge as often as you wish.

6. Sign only when the Registrar tells you

Do not sign or date either document before the appointment. Sign and date them only when the Registrar asks you to do so.

What if the Registrar cannot witness the documents?

Remain courteous. Ask the Registry to email you the reason the Registrar is unable to witness the document.

Enduring Power of Attorney

Complete this form by writing your responses on the lines. Clauses with options are to be completed by placing a tick in the appropriate box and ruling through those options that do not apply.

These margin notes are not part of the prescribed form and can be removed.

Please refer to the Powers of Attorney Fact Sheet that accompanies this form for more information. The Powers of Attorney Fact Sheet is also available from the Land and Property Information website at www.nswlrs.com.au

You can appoint more than one attorney. If you appoint more than one attorney, it may be useful to appoint people who can work cooperatively and in your best interest.

(Please initial the bottom of this page)

An enduring power of attorney is a legal document that allows you (the principal) to nominate one or more persons (referred to as attorneys) to act on your behalf. An enduring power of attorney gives the attorney the authority to manage your legal and financial affairs, including buying and selling real estate, shares and other assets, operating your bank accounts and spending money on your behalf.

The attorney's power continues even if for any reason you lose your mental capacity to manage your own affairs. Once you lose your mental capacity you cannot revoke this power of attorney. If you want the power of attorney to cease if you lose your mental capacity, use the General Power of Attorney form. An attorney under an enduring power of attorney cannot make decisions about your lifestyle or health. These decisions can only be made by a guardian (whether an enduring guardian appointed by you or a guardian appointed by the Civil and Administrative Tribunal or the Supreme Court).

Enduring Power of Attorney

Important information

- A power of attorney is an important and powerful legal document. You should get legal advice before you sign it.
- It is important that you trust the person you are appointing as attorney to make financial decisions on your behalf. Your attorney must be over 18 years old and must not be bankrupt or insolvent. If your financial affairs are complicated, you should appoint an attorney who has the skills to deal with complex financial arrangements.
- A power of attorney cannot be used for health or lifestyle decisions. You should appoint an enduring guardian under the Guardianship Act 1987 if you want a particular person to make these decisions. For further information, contact the Civil and Administrative Tribunal or NSW Trustee and Guardian.
- Clause 2 of the power of attorney contains powers which will permit your attorney to use your money and assets for the attorney or anyone else as provided. You should only tick those boxes in Clause 2 if you choose that your attorney is to have that power.
- This power of attorney is for use in New South Wales only. If you need a power of attorney for interstate or overseas, you may need to make a power of attorney under their laws. The laws of some other States and Territories in Australia may give effect to this power of attorney. However, you should not assume this will be the case. You should confirm whether the laws of the State or Territory concerned will in fact recognise this power of attorney.

Notes for completion

Joint attorneys

If you appoint more than one attorney, you should indicate whether the attorneys are to act jointly, or jointly and severally. Attorneys who are appointed jointly are only able to act and make decisions together.

Attorneys who are appointed jointly and severally (i.e. together or separately) are able to act and make decisions independently of each other. However, you can specify that a simple majority (if you appoint 3 or more attorneys) must agree before they can act.

Substitute attorneys

If you appoint a substitute attorney, the substitute attorneys will only have authority to act as your attorney if the first appointed attorney dies, resigns or vacates their position.

You can specify for whom the substitute is to act (e.g. if you appoint A and B as attorneys and X and Y as substitutes, you can specify that X takes A's place if A vacates office).

A substitute attorney must sign an acceptance of their appointment in Clause 7 before they can act as attorney.

Do my Guardians need to be present when I sign?

The persons you nominate are called 'Guardians'. The Guardians do not need to be with you when you sign the Power of Guardianship. They may be in different states or even different countries, and they can sign at another time.

Let's say you appointed your two children to hold the Power of Guardianship. You may live in Sydney. Child one lives in Melbourne and child two lives in London. That is fine. You sign and then post the document to Melbourne. Your child in Melbourne then posts the document to your child in London to sign. This can be done over months or even years.

Don't my spouse and children make decisions for me - anyway?

Yes, to a limited extent your spouse and children do have some rights to protect you. However, the Enduring Guardianship gives greater rights.

Your Guardians have greater rights.

When does the document come into effect?

Your enduring guardian makes decisions within the functions granted by this appointment when you are unable to make those decisions yourself.

Get a medical certificate before signing

Legal Consolidated requires you to obtain a medical certificate before you sign this appointment.

Ask your doctor to confirm that, when examined, you understood the nature and effect of appointing an enduring guardian. Keep the certificate with your appointment. If you are unable to obtain the certificate, telephone us before signing. The certificate supports the evidence of your capacity and does not replace the witness's assessment.

Making copies

Protect and carefully store your Enduring Guardianship. Ask whoever needs it to take a copy. They can then "certify" (confirm it is a true copy) the document and keep the copy. Always get your original document back. Telephone us if someone is refusing to hand you back the original.

Can a Guardian override my wishes?

By law it is only used for your best interests. It cannot be used to benefit anyone else. It is in place to protect you. If you lose confidence in your guardian, then revoke the Enduring Guardianship if you are still of sound mind.

Can I revoke this document?

You must have capacity to revoke this appointment. Contact us before revoking it so we can prepare the required notice and explain the witnessing and service requirements.

Take the doctor's letter with you to the witnessing appointment. The letter does not bind the Registrar. The Registrar must still form their own view that you understand the document before witnessing it. Contemporaneous medical evidence helps answer later allegations that you did not understand what you were signing. It also gives the Registrar useful evidence where capacity is likely to become an issue.

Medical evidence is particularly valuable where there is cognitive decline, a diagnosis affecting decision-making, recent serious illness, medication affecting cognition, or a family dispute waiting in the wings.

Did the 2026 Regulation end the free service?

No.

The Guardianship Regulation 2026 (NSW) started on 1 September 2026. It introduced a new Enduring Guardian form with an optional function addressing restrictive practices.

The new form raised practical questions about the witnessing process. However, the Regulation did not remove Registrars from the Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW). Registrars remain authorised to witness Enduring Guardians.

The Regulation also does not affect the separate Powers of Attorney Act 2003 (NSW). Registrars also remain authorised to witness Enduring Powers of Attorney.

The NSW Local Court's published guidance confirms that Registrars are authorised witnesses for both documents and directs people to contact the Local Court for an appointment.

The Local Court provides this witnessing service free of charge. Legal Consolidated prepares its Enduring Powers of Attorney and Appointments of Enduring Guardian with that witnessing process in mind.

Do my Guardians need to be present when I sign?

The persons you nominate are called 'Guardians'. The Guardians do not need to be with you when you sign the Power of Guardianship. They may be in different states or even different countries, and they can sign at another time.

Let's say you appointed your two children to hold the Power of Guardianship. You may live in Sydney. Child one lives in Melbourne and child two lives in London. That is fine. You sign and then post the document to Melbourne. Your child in Melbourne then posts the document to your child in London to sign. This can be done over months or even years.

Don't my spouse and children make decisions for me - anyway?

Yes, to a limited extent your spouse and children do have some rights to protect you. However, the Enduring Guardianship gives greater rights.

Your Guardians have greater rights.

When does the document come into effect?

Your enduring guardian makes decisions within the functions granted by this appointment when you are unable to make those decisions yourself.

Get a medical certificate before signing

Legal Consolidated requires you to obtain a medical certificate before you sign this appointment.

Ask your doctor to confirm that, when examined, you understood the nature and effect of appointing an enduring guardian. Keep the certificate with your appointment. If you are unable to obtain the certificate, telephone us before signing. The certificate supports the evidence of your capacity and does not replace the witness's assessment.

Making copies

Protect and carefully store your Enduring Guardianship. Ask whoever needs it to take a copy. They can then "certify" (confirm it is a true copy) the document and keep the copy. Always get your original document back. Telephone us if someone is refusing to hand you back the original.

Can a Guardian override my wishes?

By law it is only used for your best interests. It cannot be used to benefit anyone else. It is in place to protect you. If you lose confidence in your guardian, then revoke the Enduring Guardianship if you are still of sound mind.

Can I revoke this document?

You must have capacity to revoke this appointment. Contact us before revoking it so we can prepare the required notice and explain the witnessing and service requirements.

The court can also revoke this document.

Your document is revoked at death. (Conversely, your Will only takes effect at death.)

Did the 2026 Regulation end the free service?

No.

The Guardianship Regulation 2026 (NSW) started on 1 September 2026. It introduced a new Enduring Guardian form with an optional function addressing restrictive practices.

The new form raised practical questions about the witnessing process. However, the Regulation did not remove Registrars from the Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW). Registrars remain authorised to witness Enduring Guardians.

The Regulation also does not affect the separate Powers of Attorney Act 2003 (NSW). Registrars also remain authorised to witness Enduring Powers of Attorney.

The NSW Local Court's published guidance confirms that Registrars are authorised witnesses for both documents and directs people to contact the Local Court for an appointment.

The Local Court provides this witnessing service free of charge. Legal Consolidated prepares its Enduring Powers of Attorney and Appointments of Enduring Guardian with that witnessing process in mind.
